

What's your wish for the world? How would you draw it?

Know K-12 educators or students? Tell them about Doodle 4 Google, a competition where students redesign the Google logo around a specific theme.

The champion doodler will win a college scholarship and computers for his or her school, and have his or her design viewed by millions on the Google homepage for one day, then exhibited in the Smithsonian's, Cooper-Hewitt, National Design Museum in New York City.

Check out www.google.com/doodle4google for official rules and details on how to enter the competition. Teachers must register their school by March 17, 2009, and doodles are due by March 31, 2009.
